TRIP ONE – GOLDEN CIRCLE SIGHTSEEING + SNORKELING ADVENTURE

This jam-packed adventure starts with a scenic drive to the world famous Geysir, a geothermal area where the ground gurgles, bubbles and super heated water escapes shooting into the air with enormous force. Next stop is Gullfoss waterfalls where water rushes down three steps of lava layers with breathtaking power and grandeur. After lunch you'll drive onwards to Þingvellir National park and UNESCO world heritage where the great tectonic plates of America and Europe meet. Here you can see the continental rift up close as you snorkel in a dry suit through the stunningly clear blue waters of Silfra.

TRIP THREE – GLACIER HIKING + ICE CLIMBING AT SÓLHEIMAJÖKULL GLACIER

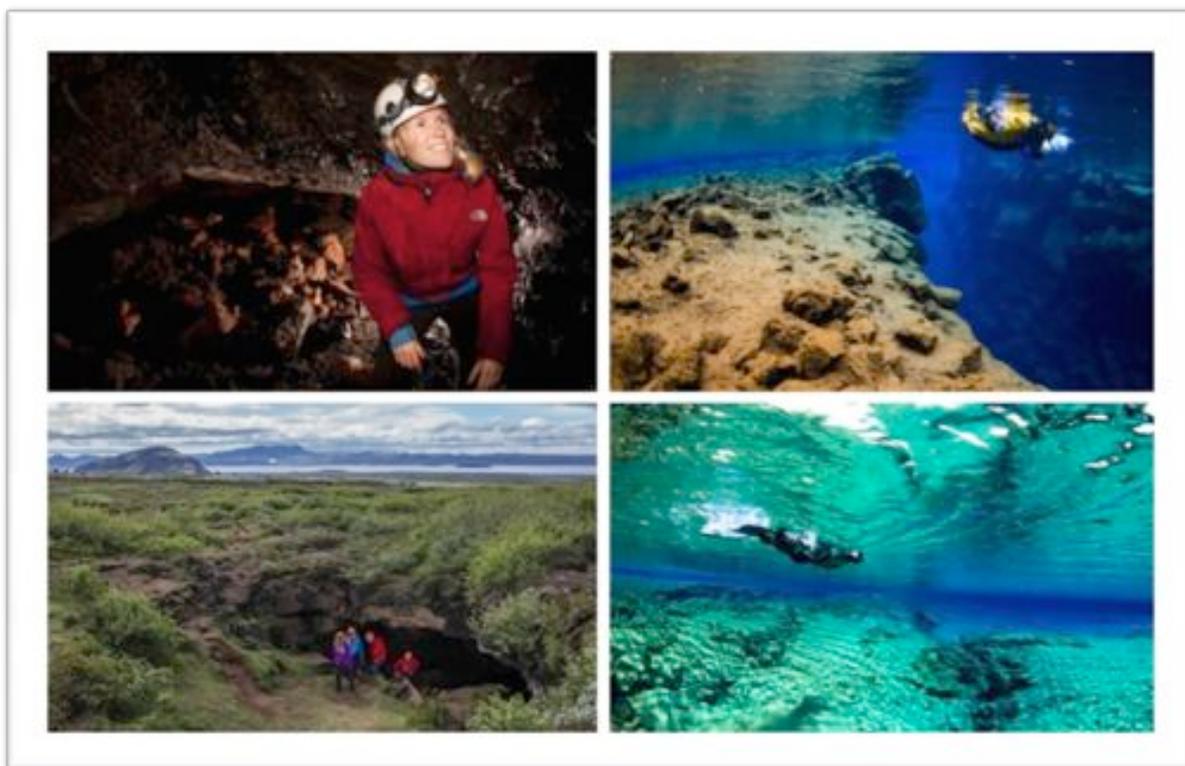

Your chance to visit the magnificent Sólheimajökull glacier. This ever-changing tongue of ice flows down from Myrdalsjökull one of the largest glaciers in Iceland.

Once fitted with your crampons your glacier guide will lead you up onto the ice field where a wonderland of ice formations, ridges, sink holes and deep crevasses await your discovery. Along the way - with all the safety equipment you will need provided - you can try your hand at ice climbing. On the drive back to Reykjavik you'll get the chance to stop at the beautiful Skógafoss waterfall.

TRIP FOUR – CAVING IN GJÁBAKKAHELLIR + SNORKELING IN SILFRA

Explore two of Iceland's hidden environments in this combo-tour of Þingvellir national park. The Gjábkakahellir cave is a perfect example of an Icelandic lava tube and is situated in one of the most active volcano areas in the world. Walking into the lava tube you'll discover the marvels that volcanic activity has created.

In the afternoon you'll get to snorkel the Silfra fissure, where the great tectonic plates of America and Europe meet. The crystal clear water in the deep fissure create an otherworldly scene that is famous for its heavenly shades of blue and a feeling of being weightless as you float down with the slow current.

TRIP FIVE – HIKING TO THE TOP OF MT. HEKLA VOLCANO

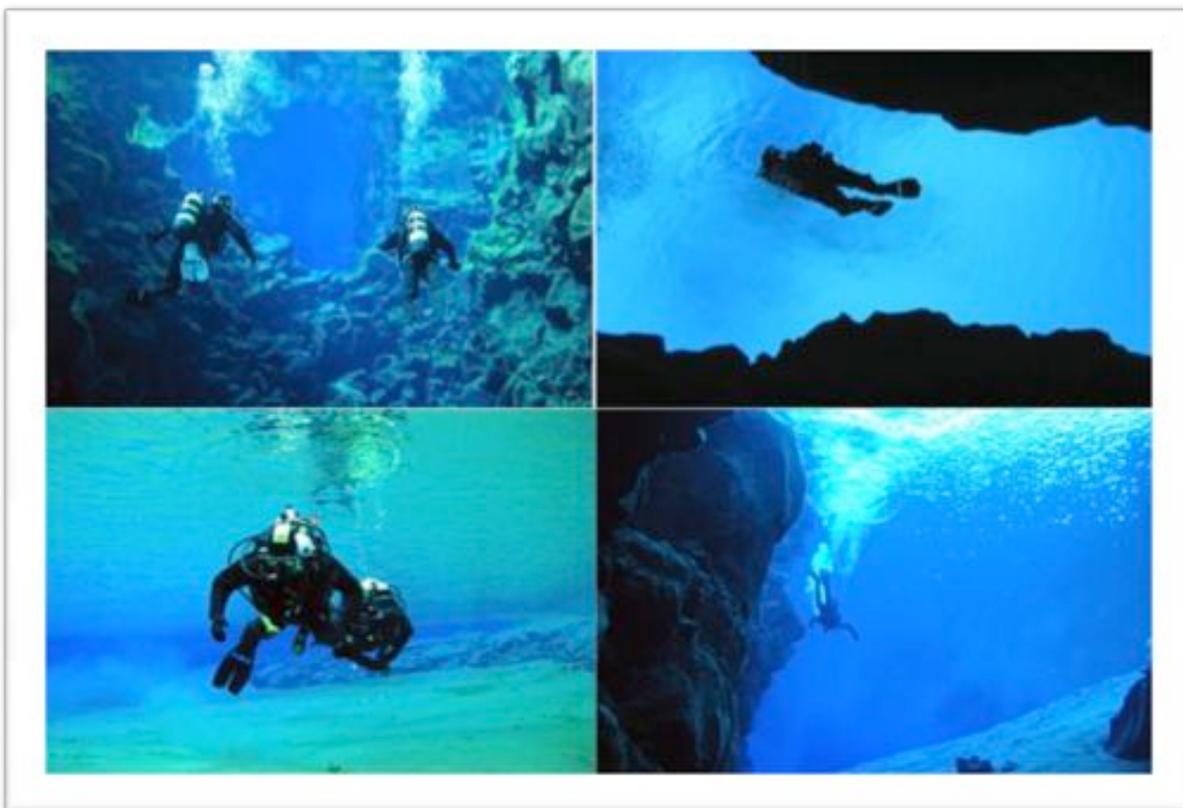

Iceland's most famous mountain Mt. Hekla is the second most active volcano in Iceland and towers over South Iceland at roughly 1500 meters. For hundreds of years the mountain was believed to be the gateway to hell and no one dared climbing it. That was until, Eggert Ólafsson, a famous Icelandic biologist, decided to throw caution to the wind and succeeded in summiting the mountain in the summer of 1750.

Since then hiking to the top of Mt. Hekla has become a popular route and provides stunning panoramic views from the top. The hike up takes an average of 3-4 hours over rough lava fields and ice and snow as the peak draws nearer.

Departs Wednesdays at 8am from Reykjavik
35.990 ISK per person including pick up from Reykjavik
Trip difficulty rating 3 out of 5

TRIP SIX – DIVING IN SILFRA RAVINE IN ÞINGVELLIR NATIONAL PARK

One of Iceland's best-kept secrets, Silfra is situated in the heart of Þingvellir national park, a UNESCO world heritage site. An otherworldly underwater scene located directly on top of the rift between the continents of America and Europe, the crystal clear water in the deep fissure gives you a feeling of being weightless as you glide along with the lazy current.

Visibility is amazing and is only limited by the density of the water itself. Depth varies from 10 to 30 meters. This is without question one of the best dive sites in the world. PADI open water or compatible required to undertake this dive, PADI advanced and dry suit certificates recommended. All dives are performed in a dry suit.
